Matthew 4:23 (NKJV)

Health Nugget

Even if you are not "salt sensitive", meaning that salt does not affect your blood pressure, eating too much salt may still damage your blood vessels, heart, kidneys and brain. High salt intake, defined as greater than 2.3 grams per day (1 tsp), stiffens the lining of blood vessels, weakens heart and kidney function and impairs our hormonal response to stress. Americans currently average about 3.5 grams, mainly in processed foods.
