Health Nugget

Recently, the official WHO body that decides what is and is not cancer-causing, concluded that alcoholic beverages—all alcoholic beverages—are to be considered “carcinogenic to humans.” Most recent research has focused on acetaldehyde, a toxic metabolite, as the cancer-causing agent. It seems that bacteria in our mouths oxidize alcohol into this carcinogen, which we then swallow. There is convincing evidence that alcohol consumption at >1 drink/d increases the risk of breast cancer to the tune of > 5000 preventable deaths per year in the US.
