Health Nugget

"Higher fruit intake is associated with lower risk of all-cause and disease-specific mortality. However, data on individual fruits are limited, and the generalizability of these findings to the elderly remains uncertain. The objective of this study was to examine the association of apple intake with all-cause and disease-specific mortality over 15 years in a cohort of women aged over 70 years." A total of 1456 women were followed, and the analysis found that higher apple intake was associated with lower risk of cancer mortality, and that higher total fruit and banana intakes were associated with lower risk of CVD mortality also. Ref. Apple intake is inversely associated with all-cause and disease-specific mortality in elderly women. British Journal of Nutrition, Volume 115 - Issue 5, 14 March 2016, pp. 860-867
