Health Nugget

A 1998-1999 school-based survey of 4746 adolescents from ethnically and socioeconomically diverse communities in the Minneapolis/St. Paul, Minn, metropolitan area studied the relationship between family meals and adolescent health behaviors. "Frequency of family meals was inversely associated with tobacco, alcohol, and marijuana use; low grade point average; depressive symptoms; and suicide involvement after controlling for family connectedness (odds ratios, 0.76-0.93)." *Ref.
