Memory Text

“Now he who received seed among the thorns is he who hears the word, and the cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches choke the word, and he becomes unfruitful.”

Matthew 13:22 (NKJV)

Health Nugget

The symbionts—the good bacteria that live in our gut and are in symbiosis with us—are largely nourished by fruits, vegetables, nuts, seeds, and beans. Pathobionts, the disease-causing bacteria that may disrupt our microbial balance, instead appear to be fed by meat, dairy, eggs, junk and fast food. Indeed, what we eat determines what kind of bacterial growth we foster in our gut, which can increase or decrease our risk of some of our leading killer diseases. To be continued.
